Introduction. This chapter examines how the law influences nursing. It begins by highlighting that the Nursing and Midwifery Council's Code, which sets out the standard for professional practice, is under- pinned by the law. The chapter then defines the term 'law' and considers how laws are made by looking at the role of Parliament and the courts. You are then introduced to the published forms of law and are encouraged to become familiar with the main features of an Act of Parliament ...

Chapter 1 Introduction to law in nursing

The NMC (2008) provides strict guidance about the nursing practitioners code of practice and the accountability that members of the profession should have towards patients in their care; it is in light of this that nursing professionals have a responsibility to develop their knowledge about the law relating to clinical practice and the ethical frameworks surrounding why decisions and judgements are made when delivering patient care.

Law and Ethics in Nursing

It is against the law to claim to be, or to practise as, a nurse or midwife in the UK, or as a nursing associate in England, if you are not on the relevant part of our register. It is also a criminal offence for anyone who, with intent to deceive, causes or permits someone else to falsely represent them as being on the register, or makes a false representation about them being on the NMC register.

The nursing associate is a protected title in law and the role is regulated in England by the NMC, which means that you can only employ people into the role who are qualified and registered as nursing associates. Nursing associates are subject to regulatory requirements such as revalidation and fitness to practise.

Nursing Malpractice, Negligence, and Law: The Definitive Guide by Audrey Wilson Last updated May 25, 2020 According to the National Practitioner Data Bank (NPDB), more nurses are called defendants in malpractice lawsuits. The number of malpractice payments carried out by nurses grew from 253 to 413 between 1998 and 2001.

Nursing Malpractice, Negligence, and Law: The Definitive Guide

Registered nurses have a duty of care and a legal liability to their patients. When delegating an activity, for example to an HCA or AP, they must ensure that it has been appropriately delegated. The NMC code says registrants must be accountable for their decisions to delegate tasks and duties to other people. It says they must:
